

Dang it I forgot to do
my homework!

I'm sorry Mrs. Galley, sometimes I just struggle to keep up with all of the websites
we use.

Its okay Mike, I will give you an extension, but don't let it happen again.

A simple cartoon character with a light brown head and neck, a neutral face with two dots for eyes and a small straight line for a mouth. She has voluminous, curly blonde hair. She is wearing a teal short-sleeved collared shirt and black pants. Her arms are slightly out to the sides, and her legs are apart in a walking or standing pose.

If only there was a way for me to see all my work in one place.

Howdy! How was your day son?

It sounds like you need to get organized with Assignment Manager™

It was okay, but I forgot to do my homework again.

Wow! I can finally see all of my assignments in one place! I don't know how I got by without this!

Good job Mike!
You ended the semester with all A's!

Annie then spent time organizing the work she planned giving to her students for the next month. She needed to do this as soon as possible because she doesn't have much time at home having three kids to take care of.

This is Trayonte's third class of the day and his teacher assigned him homework on another random website.

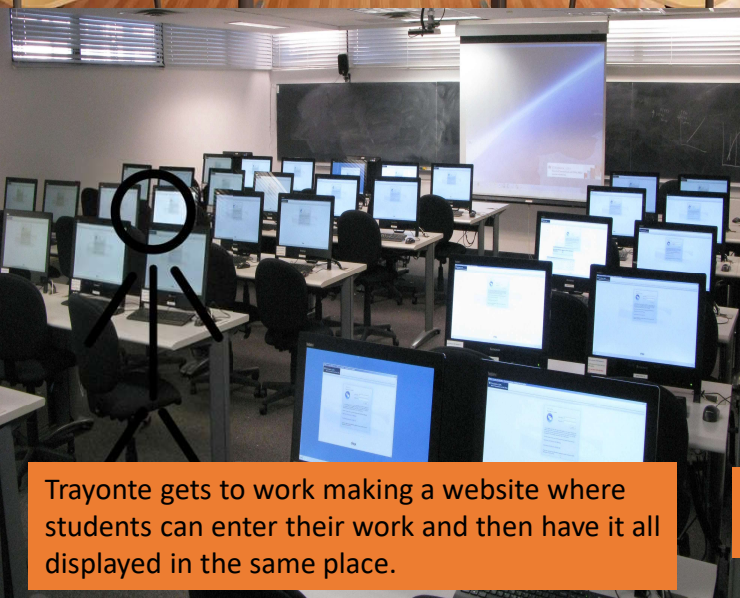

Made by Winn Wahl

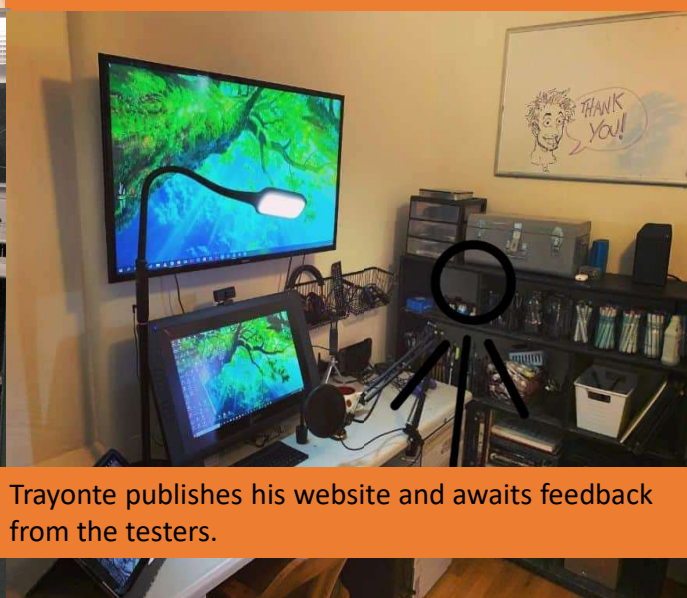

Trayonte is in his fourth class and notices there is a problem, there isn't just one place he can go to, to look at all his work at once. It's a bunch of different websites.

While resting, Trayonte comes up with the idea to create to make a website where all his homework can be seen at once.

Trayonte gets to work making a website where students can enter their work and then have it all displayed in the same place.

Trayonte publishes his website and awaits feedback from the testers.

Trayonte meets with his friends who give him great feedback on the website and it is finally ready to release to everyone. Trayonte's website helped everyone organize their work.
